Washington, November 22,-The prison van in which Guiteau wos conveyed to the court this morning was escorted y six mounted policemen in addition to two officers who rode on the van.
The trip was made without incident.
After reaching the prisoners' room,
Guiteau partook heartily of breakfast and expressed himself satisfied with the police arrangements made to insure his safety. He thought the same precau-tions should have been observed at the outset. The court room was crowded in every nook and corner.

John Guiteau was in the court room soon after nine o'clock and obtained subposites for six additional witnesses. None of the gentlemen favited by Guiteau to assist in his defence have yet responded. It is understood, however, that Scoville expects to secure the ser-vices of Trude, of Chicago, later in the week. Several legal experts summoned by defence are in attendance this morning, among them Dr. Rice, who it is said, advised his committal in an msane assylum four years ago on the ground of emotional insanity. Guiteau was brought into the court room shortly after ten o'clock, and Scoville resumed the argument. He called the attention of the jury to the plea set up by defence of insanity and discussed at great length the growth and changes of public opinion upon the subject of insanity and its treatment by courts when set up as defense in criminal cases. He cited numerous rulings in several noted ones. He claimed that the plea of in-sanity having been set up by the de-fence the burden of proof rests with the prosecution. There was just as much ground to indicate Guiteau's insanity. "Why," said Scoville, "even President Garfield said, 'why did this man do it? He must be insane." Blaine must have believed Guiteau insane." Col. Corkhill here rose and said with much emphasis, "If you will allow me, Mr. Scoville, the President thought he was not insane; he thought him sane all the time. Blaine never thought him insane. He has said under oath he believes him sane." Scoville explained that he spoke from information derived from the newspapers and would not take issue on the statement. He then took up the had, he said, retained to the present day as a marked characteristic of the sturdy adherence to relative convictions which caused the expulsion of the Hugenots. He said insanity was hereditary in the family, and went on the time comes for argument he will to give the story of Guiteau's life in get his answer.

and generally gave them all they wanted on the other side. After a moment of quiet explanation to the prisoner, Scoville was about to proceed when Guiteau, apparently appeased, waved his hand pleasantly to Scoville and said, "Go in, Mr. Scoville, that is an interesting story and is correct in delieve I produce an item of evidence for first class references and so I got business. Besides that I had no bad habits of any kind. To illustrate Guiteau's freaks as an indication of insanity, Scoville related his rambling attempt at speech on certain occasions when he had been assigned by the court as counsel for the prisoner on trial. Gniteau, again in his excited manner, said: "That's absolutely false, I never tried the case with Charlie Reed in my life. I don't want to interfere with your theory, but your remarks are false. I want the jury to understand my peculiarities. There are a good many people who will swear that I am irsane." Recess Recess.

ttle more reason than the inmates."

This sally seemed to amuse Guiteau When this letter was read the prisoner little more reason than the inmates. immensely, and a broad smile broke over his features, which reappeared two or three times, as if his mind recurred to it. Scoville called attention to the prejudice which undoubtedly existed against the plan of inserting and i isted against the plea of insanity generally, and especially in the case of the prisoner. He said newspapers had intimated that Guiteau was only feigning insanity, and such seemed the general theory of the public.

In the last letter, dated October, 1866, it is stated that his views had changed; that he desired to leave the community and go to New York to qualify for a position in some bank, and asking Scoville to lend him $50. The prisoner might have succeeded.

After recess Scoville continued upon the same line of illustration, frequently using the expression "mental incompetency." Guiteau freely at the slightest imputation of the lack of brain powest imputation of the lack of brain power and his intense egotism showed itself in frequent interruptions. At one time he exclaimed, in taking exception to the statement of Scoville, "It is not true and it can't be shown. I always speak the truth," and again he broke in, "I had brains enough but my mind was devoted to theology, that's why I ran behind. There is no money in theology business. I am out of that now." Scoville continued to speak of his imprecunious condition at that time as scoville continued to speak of his impecunious condition at that time as shown by his seedy clothes, when Guiteau interrupted him with a show of impatience, saying, "I was always well dressed. Don't put that in." Scoville related an incident in Guiteau's life which his friends thought at that time was insanity. Guiteau with much warmth said, "I've heard that story before and it is absolutely false, Don't tell any such stuff as that again." Scoville then related Guiteau's varied experiences during the Moody and Sankey revivals and his efforts and failures as a lecturer on religious subfailures as a lecturer on religious sub-jects and the lack of appreciation shown by his audiences. Guiteau supplied the explanation, "New ideas in that sub-ject. That they had not got to them at that time and thinking perhaps he had not quite made his meaning plain he added, "soon afterward I had ideas," but no reputation and ideas would not draw Guiteau belief that he was serving the Lord and that it was the Lord's business to pay his debts incurred in his society, was mentioned by Scoville when Guiteau laughingly supplied, another illustration, "I dead headed from Toledo to Chicago, on the impression my appearance made with the conductors. I got put off twice though." Scoville continued his description of Guiteau's religious experience and was was frequently interrupted by the prisoner with, "I left a $5,000 business to do that work and you see how I made out." And again: "The same made out." And again: "The same kind of business Apostle Paul was engaged in. He got his pay and I expect to get mine sometime out of that book I bought," A moment after with a show of enthusiasm and raising his voice he exclaimed, "I used to go around the streets selling my lectures to people who thought I my lectures to people who thought I was a book agent, and I was happier when I was doing that work than ever before. I was working for the Lord, not for money. Scoville then alluded to Guiteau's susceptibility to the influ-ence of women and said such was his disposition in this respect that he would talk to any woman so long as she would

I got a response from a lady worth (Laughter generally indulged in.) Scoville continued: It is true as he says, that notice brought on a response which shows there is one woman in the United States that probably has lost her reason also. This remark elicited a great deal of laughter but not from the prisoner, who exclaimed: "I wrote her two letters and she wrote me two. You, Scoville, suppressed the rest. I have been looking for a response to my last letter for three weeks and am certain you have lied about it. I tell you so publicity" he continued raising his voice: "You can't fool me. I am going to follow her, (laughter).

Scoville-The letter's Guiteau wrote I did not send. "No you did not send them. I know you had lied about it. That is not the first you have told," cried the prisoner emphasizing his words with a blows on the table. I knew you had been lying. You told you sent those letters and now you say you have not. The court remarked to Scoville that if there were any such letters they never could reach the jury and this attempt to get into public colloquy with this man is reprehensible. Let this man play his McNeal has been arrested, and it is thought he will be lynched by the friends of the woman. not been surveyed, yet it is ascertained that on the southern part of the reservation there are extensive deposits of coal. Fuel is scarce in the Territory of Arizona, in which this reservation lies, and hence coal deposits are supposed to be very valuable. Parties have sought to contract with the Indians for the privilege of mining coal and durthe privilege of mining coal, and dur-ing last summer a contract of this kind was submitted to the Department for approval. The contract was disapprov-ed, as neither the Indians or the Department had lawful authority to make or approve of such a contract. I consider this a matter of sufficient importance to call it to your special attention.

The reservation is a large one and might, perhaps, be so lessened, without injury to the Indians, so as to exclude the deposits of coat, or, if this cannot be done, it may be enlarged to corresponding etxent elsewhere, and the coal-bearing portion withdrawn from the reservation. The coal is, and will be needed for the proper development of Arizona, but in providing for the sale of land, care should be taken that coal is not monypolized by a few parties to the injury of the Territory.

Investigating a Consul-General.

Chicago, Nov. 22.-A special from Washington says: Some two years ago Col. John S. Mosby, U. S. Consul to Hong Kong, preferred charges against his predecessor, then Consul-General at Shanghai. General Bailey, Secretary of State, ordered an investigation and the charges are being sustained. Bailey was removed and it was given out that the Department of Justice would request the Secretary of State to insti-tute proceedings against Bailey in the criminal courts of this country. Well, Judge Denvy succeeded him at Shanghai and he investigated him there, as I had done here, and reported all his robberies while consul at Shanghai to the State Department, yet no step has forfeited his bond as consul at Hong Kong, but also at Shanghai. The latest account of his rascality was the robbery of a bank in California with a bo-gus draft. He also cheated the Pacific Mail Company with bogus drafts of his

Washington, Nov. 22.-William Jones was released this morning on $5,000 bail. E. G. Wheeler and Debastian Amen becoming his securities, Washington specials says: The man Jones, arrested for shooting Guiteau, is in all probability the wrong man. The specials also agree in commanding Scoville's defense as unexpectedly strong. One says: Scoville cannot pass before the public as an unskilful lawyer any longer. He is not only shrewd, quick and sharp, but possessed of consummate ability. His reply to Robinson was delivered in the most moderate and deprecatory tones with every indication of personal announcement. That such an embarrassement should have occurred completely brushed the Washington Attorneys and complimentary remarks of Judge Cox in emiting Robinson from further attendance upon the case could not wipe out the feeling of victory gained by Scoville in securing the removal of a man who had been of no earthly benefit to the defense.

Las Cruces Tragedies.

Las Cruces, N. M., Nov. 22.—This place, hitherto the most quiet and orderly in the Territory, has come to the front with a series of tragedies recently which are not calculated to redound to its credit or prosperity.
